THE Community Arts Project (CAP) will hold its open day tomorrow from 10am to 5pm, when the year's work will be on display for the public to view and in some cases, to buy.

In the morning there will be exhibitions of part-time students' art, ranging from paintings and pottery to wood-cut prints, photographs and ceramic sculpture. Stalls selling artwork, magazines, books, printed clothes, jewellery and food will be run by other organizations which will have information on their work.

In the afternoon there will be a programme of performances by CAP dance, drama, music and creative writing students. The dance group will per-
